DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

Claims 26-28 and 30-50 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention.

Claims 26-28 and 30-34 each recite the subject matters that, at an end portion of the substrate, a side surface of the second layer of the input terminal portion is coplanar with a side surface of the first insulating layer. However, the original disclosure lacks an adequate description regarding how such two coplanar side surfaces could be formed at the end portion of the substrate, which requires that the (right) side surface of the second layer (208) of the input terminal portion be (vertically) aligned with the (right) side surface of the first insulating layer (205), as shown in Figs. 3 and 4 in the instant invention. Such recited coplanar-type aligned feature requires adequate description, because: if the right end shown in Figs. 4A and 4B of the instant invention is truly at the (right) edge of the substrate, the later-formed second layer (208) would also normally have to at least partially cover the exposed side surface of the earlier-formed underlying first insulating layer (205), which would prohibit the formation of the recited coplanar structure, even with the most collimated deposition tools available. The formation of such recited coplanar structure would also appear to be unlikely by utilizing any deposition mask(s), since it would require the mask layer to extend beyond the (right) edge of the underlying substrate.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to the above rejected claims have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
